A NOTE FROM THE ARTISTIC DIRECTOR, THEATRE, MUSIC & FILM:

Welcome and thank you for joining us.

Our students, instructors, and staff have put in the grind and grit to bring these works to life—a true reflection of the resilience, creativity, and teamwork that thrive at Arts Umbrella.

This year's Expressions shows share themes that are both deeply personal and universal — the strength we find in each other, the courage to face the challenges of being human, and the beauty of finding love in its many forms. These shows are not just stories we tell but, as we hope you see tonight, they're the essence of being human.

In our Theatre, Film, & Music programs at Arts Umbrella, we explore what Dr. Dan Siegel called “Mwe” (me + we): that each “me” is inextricably linked to the “we” we find ourselves within, whether we recognize it or not. This is what culture is. Working together on each of these pieces, we explore a cultural intelligence that is rarely taught: An understanding that when we share our truth with each other - whether in a playground, on the streets, in a forest or a book - we become more powerful and can change our world. In this light, the work of the young people here today is a celebration of the connections that define us and the transformation we can achieve when creating, together.

Thank you for being part of this, for sharing your time, your families, and your dreams with us as we work together to craft a tomorrow that looks and feels like the dreams we need today.

ARTS UMBRELLA PRESENTS

The Forests Wild

BY FRANCIS DOWLATABADI

Theatre Troupe presents:

THE FORESTS WILD

By Francis Dowlatabadi

April 26th and May 3rd at 7:00pm

Nine students are hiking through the wilderness of Vancouver Island on a five day camping trip. Unsupervised, the goal of their Eco program is for them to work together as a non-hierarchical collective. However, on the final day of their trip, strange noises are heard, and students are going missing. As night falls they are forced to confront one another in ways they never imagined as they discover that the forest is far wilder than they ever dreamed.

Content Warning – Flashing lights, sudden loud noises

DIRECTOR'S NOTES:

It has been a real pleasure to work on The Forests Wild, a new script written by Francis Dowlatabadi, created specifically with these students in mind. The students participated in a series of workshops with myself and Francis, reading several drafts over the past year. They were able to witness firsthand how a script evolves through the writing process. And by being active in the dramaturgy process their notes and thoughts about the characters and story have become integral to the final product you see here.

This play asks the question: What if the forest knew how we treated it? And what if it learned from us, and returned the favour?

At its heart this is a story about relationships in a variety of forms. About the pain and struggle of knowing yourself, about the risk and reward of trusting others, and about the pressing need to respect our shared environment.

In reckoning with their relationship with the forest, these nine characters learn lessons that we could all do with paying attention to.

DIRECTOR'S NOTES:

It is such a pleasure to be returning to the simple, honest and vibrant world of Dennis Foon. Four years ago, when I took over the Theatre Troupe (then the Junior Theatre Troupe) I programmed Kindness by Foon. As soon as Expressions wrapped, I knew I wanted to explore his earlier work, Seesaw. Truly the road map for his later play, Seesaw, examines what it means to feel isolated and invisible at home and how students may manifest that at school. Each character navigates this terrain in a unique way - Some take it out of their classmates, some take it out on their parents and others take it out on themselves. As an educator, I am always searching for texts that will challenge and resonate with my students. This script, and the themes it explores, has allowed students to apply the skills and techniques they have learned while instinctually understanding the given circumstances and the realities of these characters. It is such a joy to see students really understanding and loving the material.

In the original production, all the non-grade 7 characters were represented by puppets made by Canadian legend Ronnie Burkett. In our interpretation, we wanted to pay homage to this concept while making each family unique. It was important that the POV of the four main students was highlighted, thus we see a father attached to puppet strings, a mother stuck looking in a mirror and a disembodied giant bully voice. We hope that youth and adult audiences alike will resonate with this simple story of perseverance and identity allowing them reflections on themselves.

On a personal note, four of the six actors you'll see today were in Laura's and my production of Kindness during their first year with the program. Four years later, to see their growth as individuals and artists is so encouraging and really solidifies why we do what we do. Their understanding of the craft and ability to identify their own needs within the process is the backbone of our program. Enjoy the show!

Newsies Jr. is a high-energy musical about the power of young voices fighting for justice. Inspired by true events and set in 1899 New York City, it follows a group of youths known as “newsies” who sell newspapers to survive. When publisher Joseph Pulitzer raises prices at their expense, they take a stand, going on strike to demand fair treatment. Led by the optimistic Jack Kelly, and with support from determined reporter Katherine Plumber and Vaudeville star Medda Larkin, they rally together to expose the harsh realities faced by working children.

ARTS UMBRELLA PRODUCTION OF

Disney

JR.

This fast paced show is a story of resilience, unity, and the power of standing up for what's right. As the young newsies face powerful opposition, they learn that even the smallest voices can spark change. Packed with heart, hope, and high-energy numbers, this inspiring musical reminds us that courage and community can change the world.

A story of hope, empowerment, and the power of the press, Newsies Jr. is an inspiring tale that reminds us that anyone—no matter how small—can spark a revolution.

DIRECTOR'S NOTES:

Welcome to our production of Newsies! At its core, this musical is about freedom, belonging, and the idea that anyone—no matter how small—can spark a revolution. It's a timeless and universal reminder of the power of young voices.

Our version unfolds through the eyes of Jack Kelly, a young artist and Newsie fighting for his place in a world stacked against him. His experience is one of division—us vs. them—which we have explored in both style and design. The authority figures Jack sees as “other” appear as exaggerated, caricatured puppets, reflecting how he perceives and sketches them. This storytelling lens highlights the deep divide between the Newsies and those who hold power.

Collaboration has been central to our process. We’ve approached Newsies as an ensemble piece, with performers shifting roles and physically shaping the world around them. The cast has brought this production to life through a blend of directed and devised choreography, incorporating Frantic Assembly-inspired movement. These physical storytelling elements ensure that every performer plays an active role in the world we've built together.

This production is a testament to the passion and commitment of these young artists. They have embraced not only the technical challenges of music and choreography but also the creative process of devising and ensemble work, making this Newsies uniquely their own.

To the cast, crew, and creative team—thank you for your dedication, creativity, and adventurous storytelling. And to you, our audience, thank you for supporting young artists and live theatre.

Now, seize the day!

Based on the book of the same title by New York Times bestselling author Jodi Picoult, Between the Lines is an empowering and enchanting new musical for anyone seeking to find their place in the world. An outsider in a new town and a new highschool, Delilah seeks comfort in the pages of her favorite book, where she feels heard and understood by the handsome Prince Oliver. But as the lines between fantasy and reality begin to blur in extraordinary and astonishing ways, Delilah has to confront whether she alone has the power to rewrite her own story. Will she fight for herself or get lost between the pages forever?

Content Warning: Some swearing, and a minor panic attack is depicted in the first act.

DIRECTOR'S NOTES:

As a kid, I used to escape into books. At 8 years old, I devoured Little Women in one evening imagining that I was Jo March the whole time. I could see the characters and the setting so clearly and in such great detail that my world slipped away for a while and I was transported.

Before I ever saw a movie or a play, books were my earliest introduction to the magic of world building and storytelling.

A lot of people use stories to escape. For most, it's what we seek to do when we enter a theatre. But as theatre makers, we hope to push beyond escapism to affect an audience so deeply that you leave a little different than you were before you entered. In that way a theatre is a sort of Liminal Space. I've always been fascinated with liminality: the space between “what was” and “what’s next”.

Teenagehood is a liminal space. It’s the space between not quite a child anymore but not quite an adult yet either. Not only does our story follow teenagers navigating this awkward in-between time, but it is also being performed by teenagers navigating this awkward in-between time.

I hope their beautiful work on this fantastical story moves you to change: to do that thing you’ve been meaning to do, to stand up to that bully, to see something in a different light.

You are the writer of your own story.

Sketch Comedy and Improv Troupe presents:

L.O.V.E.

Conceived, written, and performed by the Sketch
Comedy and Improv Troupe

June 6th & 7th at 7pm

Otters Vivaciously Endeavoring? Lighthouses Offered Virtually Everywhere? What is LOVE?? (Baby don't hurt me, don't hurt me, no more). The Arts Umbrella Sketch Comedy and Improv Troupe has deep-dived into one of human nature's most complex emotions (second only to "hangriness") in an attempt to answer this question for you.

As the group is inadvertently left unattended one evening, the SKIMP Troop explores the meaning of family, friendship, romance, puppies and salami. Free from oppressive adult surveillance and regulation, will the SKIMP Troupe finally uncover LOVE's true meaning? Or will this be LOVE's labours lost? fyi there is no Shakespeare in this show! Or is there?

Content Warning: Swearing, satirical gun violence, philosophy.

DIRECTOR'S NOTES:

“Problems that concern the group as a unit can be solved only by the group and not by a few such as a committee or the officers.” – Neva Boyd

Welcome to the Arts Umbrella Sketch Comedy and Improv Troupe. You can call us “SKIMP Troop” now, because you’re one of us. We are a team! We can do anything. Thank you for being here and being a part of the team. I hope you feel the LOVE.

“The essence of theatre is in the actor-audience encounter and the ways on which such an encounter can add meaning to life.” – Shifra Schonmann

Honestly, we couldn't do this without you. If that isn't made clear enough by these awesome quotes I've selected, then I truly don't know what more I could do. It should be obvious but also it's okay if not, perhaps you need a young person to spell it out for you. If so, please don't be shy to ask – young people are so smart and kind!

“That is the issue for the next three generations:

Can we find some type of response that is inclusive and create some basis for shared space that permits us to be face-to-face?" – Anne Bogart

You are here. We are making it happen. Together!
Thank you, team. Let's play.
